

WHY

I chose this scene because Enola's personality is very reflected. Considering the years in which this film takes place, it is worth admiring how she acts. In addition, I think that this part of the film allows us to know many things about the protagonist, such as for example that she is brave, different, that she has her own opinion and that she is a feminist woman, and at that time there were not many of them. I admire her because she is independent, she knows that she has to defend herself because it is the consequences of taking another path that society imposes on her. Thanks to women like her, who were willing to fight to change things, we are where we are today
